Excerpt: ... - ? - CHAPTER XI. - PODSNAPPERY. Mr. Podsnap was well to do, and stood very high in Mr. Podsnaps opinion. Beginning with a good inheritance, he had married a good inheritance, and had thriven exceedingly in the Marine Insurance way, and was quite satisfied. He never could make out why everybody was not quite satisfied, and he felt conscious that he set a brilliant social example in being particularly well satisfied with most things, and, above all other things, with himself. Thus happily acquainted with his own merit and importance, Mr. Podsnap settled that whatever he put behind him he put out of existence. There was a dignified conclusiveness--not to add a grand convenience--in this way of getting rid of disagreeables which had done much towards establishing Mr. Podsnap in his lofty place in Mr. Podsnaps satisfaction. I dont want to know about it; I dont choose to discuss it; I dont admit it! Mr. Podsnap had even acquired a peculiar flourish of his right arm in often clearing the world of its most difficult problems, by sweeping them behind him (and consequently sheer away) with those words and a flushed face. For they affronted him. Mr. Podsnaps world was not a very large world, morally; no, nor even geographically: seeing that although his business was sustained upon commerce with other countries, he considered other countries, with that important reservation, a mistake, and of their manners and customs would conclusively observe, Not English! when, Presto! with a flourish of the arm, and a flush.of the face, they were swept away. Elsewise, the world got up at eight, shaved close at a quarterpast, breakfasted at nine, went to the City at ten, came home at half-past five, and dined at seven. Mr. Podsnaps notions of the Arts in their integrity might have b...
