

The Irish Great Gatsby, You Know Yourself 2.0 is a madcap satire of the heady days of the Celtic Tiger in cosmopolitan Dublin as seen through the eyes of a wet-behind-the-ears radio reporter who tries to get a break, find love and put up with her ex-rockstar of a father ...usually with disastrous consequences. Spot the references to Clueless, The Simpsons, Father Ted, Bret Easton Ellis, Bridget Jones, Bonfire of the Vanities, Ulysses, PopBitch... and enjoy a handy -if not entirely serious- lexicon of Irish / Dublin expressions. You Know Yourself 2.0 pays tribute to the rantings and ravings of salt-of-the-earth Dubs caught in the maelstrom and conjures up the ghost of Flann o'Brien as it revisits the National Library of Ireland, St-Stephens Green, Grafton Street, Phoenix Park, Cafe-en-Seine, Bewleys, The Point and many other genuine Dublin places like no touristic guide ever will (oh no). You'll laugh, you'll cringe, you will call for your Ma as YKY2.0 takes in shameless petting sessions in public places, drunken pub crawls, made-on-the-fly cabby running commentaries, charity parades, glitzy funerals, daytime TV madness, a feminist analysis of action movies, tricks of the trade for winding up radio interviewees, agony aunt cliches, spivs, playboys, meat markets, shopping emporiums, on-air assassinations, the Jesus Lizard at their most riotous -and a simply cataclysmic reader-meets-author evening that will not reflect gloriously on anyone involved. YKY2.0 asks the big question... Isn't it better to live too much than too little? Ah, you know yourself!
